EVENING MENU

Didot34 owes its name to the font of the headlines of 'Het Vrije Volk', the newspaper that settled in the 'Slaakhuis' during the reconstruction in 1954. In 1956 the newspaper was the biggest national newspaper of The Netherlands. 'Het Vrije Volk' was connected to the left wing political party PVDA. When Dutch politics moved from a left wing cabinet to a right wing cabinet, and due the popularity of new media like the television, the amount of subscribers decreased. In 1970 "Het Vrije Volk" continued as local newspaper for Rotterdam with this building as the head office.
